Donald B. Smith has taught Canadian History at the University of Calgary since 1974. His primary research has been in the field of Native History, combined with a strong interest in Alberta history. He has written three biographies in Native History (on Chief Buffalo Child Long Lance, Sacred Feathers, and Grey Owl) and co-edited such books as The New Provinces, Alberta and Saskatchewan, 1905-1980 (with the late Howard Palmer), and Centennial City: Calgary 1894-1994. His popular articles have appeared in a variety of local and national publications including Alberta History, The Beaver, the Globe and Mail, and the Calgary Herald.
